

Smokeless Tobacco – NOT a Safe Alternative to Cigarettes

Harms

- Increased risk for:
- Cancers of the mouth, esophagus, and pancreas
- Noncancerous diseases of the mouth (e.g., gum disease, tooth decay & loss)
- Death from heart disease & stroke
- Early delivery & stillbirth
 when used during pregnancy
- Nicotine addiction
- Nicotine poisoning in children

Smokeless tobacco "is not a safe substitute for smoking cigarettes. It can cause cancer and a number of noncancerous oral conditions and can lead to nicotine addiction and dependence"

A Tailor-Made Approach A Houston policy:: Should be narrowly focused to address the specific problem, use by role models Should cover players and employees of teams and league Should not cover fans Should only cover pro-teams and stadiums Should only cover smokeless tobacco

Universal Support

MLB Strongly Supports

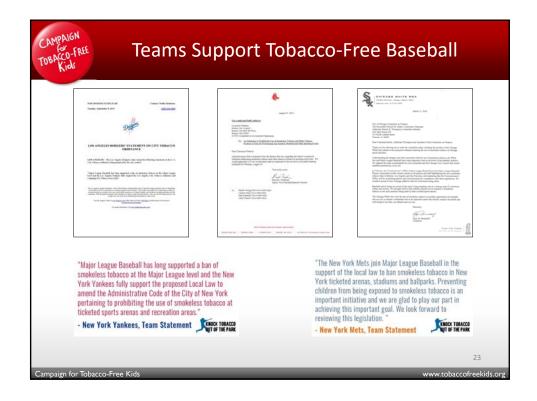

Since 2011, Major League Baseball has supported the elimination of tobacco use by all players while playing or otherwise engaged in activities associated with Major League Baseball.

Since 2017, violations of tobacco-free baseball laws are considered a violation of the contract. And since 2015 MLB has contracted with tobacco cessation experts to provide confidential cessation counseling to all players, with free NRT.

Players Understand It Too...

- Dodgers reliever J.P. Howell: "I try not to do it in front of kids. I know it's a bad example. I do all this charity stuff and then dip – it feels kind of hypocritical."
- Giants ace Madison Baumgartner also supported the law. "Hopefully it will be a positive thing for us players. It's not an easy thing to stop doing, but I support the city."
- When asked about the bill, the Mets' David Wright responded carefully.
 "On one hand, I would argue we are adults and that's a choice we choose to make. On the other hand, we are role models and the last thing we want is for an underage kid to begin using because they watched their favorite players do it."
